The Senate having signified its desire to adjourn to-morrow nine day, a larger number of appointments was expected than the above list includes. For one the nomination of Robert P. Fortea to be Commissioner of the Eleventh Census was looked for, as it is said to have been agreed upon at the Cabinet meeting on Friday. Another nomination reported to have been submitted to the Cabinet and approved by it was that of

of the General Land Office. The friends of both these gentlemen were therefore sorely disappointed to-day when the names of their candidates may not appear on the list of appointments sent to the Senate. In well-informed circles it is believed that Mr. Porter is certain to get the office for which his name has been prominently mentioned, but in the case of ex-Governor Stone there is evidently a hitch, caused, it is presumed, by protests from the friends of other candidates, of whom there is quite a number.

President Harrison. Mr. Roberts is the editor of "The Utica Herald" and has long been identified with the political interests of the Republican party in the State of New-York. At Chicago last June he was a prominent figure in the New-York delegation to the National Republican Convention. While General Harrison's Cabinet was still in the process of construction he was frequently menpointment to be Assistant Treasurer in New-York bestows upon him an office only second in importance to that of a Cabinet officer, and, perhaps, of infinitely greater personal responsibility. The Assistant Treasurer in New-York has to furnish a bond of $400,000; and his bondsmen have to qualify in at least twice that amount. This fact alone debars a great many men from taking the office, who, otherwise, in every way competent to dis-

Mr. Huston's name has been so prominently before the public in the last campaign that it seems almost superfluous to refer to him at any great length at the present time. His long experience as a banker and business man, in Indiana and elsewhere, points to him as a peculiarly happy selection of the President's for the office he has been called to fill. The fact that he has been almost as successful in politics as in business—the management of the campaign in Indiana, where he served as chairman of the Republican State Committee last year, having been particularly noteworthy—may be said to add to his qualifications for the office.

The office of First Assistant Secretary of State will be worthily filled by William F. Wharton, Massachusetts. Mr. Wharton is equally distinguished as a legislator, as a lawyer and as an author. As a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives he has been prominent as the chairman of its Judiciary Committee. As a lawyer he has repeatedly distinguished himself in the courts of his State in cases of great importance. As a writer he is well known in his profession by his work on the "Law of Contracts." His appointments, it is believed, were recommended by Governor Charles Loring, but it meets with the hearty approval of the entire Massachusetts delegation.

George H. Shields, who succeeds old Zachary Montgomery, the anti-public school fanatic of the Pacific Coast, in the important office of Assistant Attorney-General for the Interior Department, who for many years a law partner of ex-Secretary J. W. Henderson, of Missouri. This in itself is a guarantee, perhaps, of his legal attainments; but aside from that he enjoys the confidence of the Secretary of the Interior, whose legal adviser he becomes and whose friendship he has enjoyed these many years—a consideration of no small moment.

The two Territorial appointments are in accordance with the policy heretofore pursued by the President and the principle laid down in the Chicago platform. Mr. Prince, who becomes Governor of New-Mexico, is an old resident of the Territory. In President Arthur's time he was Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the Terrprominently identified with the industrial and agricultural development of New Mexico, and has written a book upon its resources. Louis A. Walker, nominated to be Secretary of Montana, is a prominent resident of that Territory, and more of a business man than a politician. His appointment was opposed by no one, which is more than can be said of a large number of Territorial appointments.

where the rivalry and quarrels of factions have generally resulted in putting a number of candidates in the field, and where the final adjustment of the difficulties has not always proved entirely satisfactory.

If the President should fail to send in any more nominations before the Senate adjourns, there would remain a number of important offices un-

ing: Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, Minister to Germany, Colleges
